

MapleWorks opens Houston office

November 16, 2009 2:15 PM ET

Canadian software developer MapleWorks Technology Inc. has opened an office in Houston.

The Houston location is the third in the United States for Ottawa-based MapleWorks, which also has offices in Boston and San Jose, Calif.

The five-year-old company specializes in software development for the mobile, video, cloud and network infrastructure markets

"We are excited to continue our expansion by this move to Houston, which has a thriving business economy that includes a strong energy base as well as high-technology industries, medical research, health care and professional services," Paul Gasparro, chief executive officer of MapleWorks, said in a statement.

Copyright 2009 bizjournals.com